ABSTRACT

A method for maintaining at a server frame context for a device that is unable to display multiple frames. The method includes generating a first data structure having a 5   first pointer for a first frame and a second pointer for a second frame, and associating a first context indicator with the first data structure. The method then includes sending from a server to a device the first context indicator, the first pointer, and a first document pointed to by the first pointer.

10